

Why we offer
you a better
opportunity for success.

Founded on the idea that people who are managed with integrity will create a better customer experience is a philosophy rooted in the core values of its managing partners, Michael Sakich and Jonathan Hicks. Constantly seeking to anticipate needs, provide meaningful solutions and demand accountability, their grass-roots strategies have rewarded them in an industry where people are seeking a sense of connection that's meaningful and real.

Careful attention to detail distinguishes In Good Company from other real estate multi-housing entities in a myriad of ways. Taking the time to learn about the resident, adding new amenities, and providing expected and extra-ordinary conveniences add significant value and build trust. From the start, IGC has taken extra steps to efficiently manage its properties, modernize its operations and control its costs, while at the same time consistently building exceptional relationships with residents, investors and employees alike. These kinds of "people initiatives" are executed with clarity and competence; talents IGC exhibits every day.
